THE TEAM THAT PLAYS TO WIN. EVERY TIME.

Some people might balk at being called a bulldog. Not Rosemarie Arnold. When the Bergen County Record dubbed her a “courtroom bulldog who won’t be leashed,” she deemed it an apt description. “We’re tenacious,” Arnold says of her team of personal injury attorneys and highly skilled paralegals. “We get a hold of a case and we don’t let go until we get results. It doesn’t matter how complicated it is. It doesn’t matter how long it takes.”

Just ask Dale Brown, who was sexually assaulted at work for 15 years. Arnold fought a three-year battle to win Brown a $4 million settlement. Or talk to Dr. Henry Lau, who suffered severe injuries in an auto accident with a penniless drunk driver. After a four-year fight, Arnold and her team won a $7.4 million verdict for her client by suing the apartment complex where the driver had been drinking.

Arnold’s victories, dedication, diligence and drive have not gone unnoticed. She’s been on the New Jersey Super Lawyers® list every year since its inception in 2005. Partner Evan Baker once again joins her on the list. For Arnold, the most cherished recognition comes from the victims of negligence, whose thank-you notes hang on the office walls. They laud her compassion, brilliance, diligence and dedication. The clients’ letters share space with notes from judges and legal experts, who praise her courtroom skills.

A certified civil trial attorney, Arnold is a trusted media expert who has shared her insight with The New York Times, New York Post, Bergen County Record, Newsday, CBS News, CNN, Fox News, NBC News, The Today Show and A Current Affair.
